RE: Visa approval issues for delegates to attend Montreal AIDS Conference in July

Dear Minister Fraser,

In July, Canada will host the International AIDS Conference in Montreal. Hundreds of delegates from Asia, Africa and Latin America scheduled to attend this conference are at risk of being excluded because Canada has not issued them visas, while reportedly about a hundred others have seen their applications rejected. As the crisis unfolds, there's a real risk of this international event missing perspectives from low- and middle-income countries (LMICs), critical to producing effective global health agendas.

With both international travel and global health becoming increasingly unequal, all eyes will be on Canada to see if we exclude or include the most critical voices (such as people living with HIV, HIV key populations, and vulnerable populations) at AIDS2022. As a committed coalition of Canadian and international based organizations and advocates, we are calling on you to urgently accelerate visa approvals and reduce barriers to entry for these delegates.

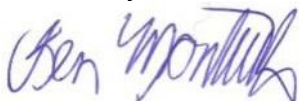

At least 400 delegates invited to attend the conference in Montreal from 29 July to 2 August, 2022, are still waiting for a response from the Canadian government - these include delegates who received scholarships to attend the conference. Much of the funding to bring these scholarship recipients to the conference came from the federal government, which contributed CAD$3 million. The conference has been registered at the Immigration, Refugee and Citizenship (IRCC) department and a special event code (22IASC) is visible on personalized invitation letters for delegates. Despite steps taken, delegates from LMICs applying for visas are facing serious challenges from an immigration system that discriminates. A survey initiated by a Latin American civil society platform had 60 people respond in just two days to say they're having issues, with half saying their applications had been rejected.

As things stand, the upcoming conference in Montreal will have doctors, scientists, and advocates from high-income countries attending in person — while many people living with HIV/AIDS from the most affected communities, as well as experienced health-care workers from the front lines, will either have to attend virtually or not at all. This is not acceptable and not the image of Canada we want to showcase to the world. The conference, which in the past has drawn around 20,000 participants from around the world, is only really valuable if experts and the communities most affected are brought together. It's at these high level meetings that key players in global health set the agenda, make critical decisions around how the global community will focus their efforts, and grow networks that will foster collaborations. There's a real risk of this conference being neither diverse nor inclusive.

We urge you to take this issue seriously. Our government often speaks with pride about being inclusive and committed to global solidarity. If no action is taken to ensure the upcoming AIDS conference in Montreal includes the voices of delegates from LMICs and the most affected HIV/AIDS communities, Canada will be an active contributor in further worsening existing inequities in global health and international travel. As someone who has provided pro bono legal services to marginalized communities in Canada, you have first-hand experience in advocating for people with lived experience and the need to bring their voices to the table. This is an opportune time for you and Canada to demonstrate leadership in addressing inequities - for conversations on global health are not global until they are accessible to everyone.

Sincerely,

Ken Monteith, Executive Director
